

Angkor Hospital for Children

Every child – rich or poor – deserves to be healthy.

Angkor Hospital for Children (AHC) is a leading children's healthcare organisation based in Siem Reap, Cambodia.

What We Do

AHC is a flagship hospital pioneering specialty treatments and care rarely available elsewhere in Cambodia, with some of the most sophisticated facilities and clinicians in the country.

We're a teaching centre of excellence inspiring a new generation of health workers.

We're working in some of Cambodia's poorest communities to empower caregivers with vital health information. Who We Are Our community is made up of hospital staff, board members, volunteers, partners and supporters, united under a common mission: improving healthcare for every child in Cambodia.

Meet Our People

Why We're Here Over the last twenty years healthcare in Cambodia has improved significantly. However, children still die from preventable causes. Access to quality healthcare within Cambodia is not yet universal. There is a lack of care available for children with long-term, rare or acute conditions – particularly for those in the poorest and most remote villages.

Why We're Here

Every child – rich or poor- deserves to be healthy.

75% of Cambodian people live in rural areas (World Bank, 2020).

A child born in Cambodia is five times more likely to die before their fifth birthday than a child born in a wealthy country (World Bank, 2020).

During the Khmer Rouge, Cambodia lost an entire generation of health workers. Only 25 doctors survived. (World Health Organization, 2015).

One in five Cambodians survive on less than US$2.7 a day (World Bank, 2020).

Children from the poorest families are three times more likely to die early than children from wealthier families (Ministry of Health Cambodia, 2015).

Leading causes of death are complications at birth, pneumonia, birth defects, diarrhoea and malaria – all preventable or treatable (World Health Organization, 2020). Cambodia's Past Civil war broke out in the late 1960s in Cambodia, culminating with the Khmer Rouge regime seizing power in 1975. In the four years that followed, an estimated 1.5 million Cambodians were killed. The educated classes were targeted and the World Health Organisation estimates only 25 medical doctors survived. The country experienced significant unrest and civil war until the early 1990s. After decades of violence, the healthcare system collapsed – subjecting the Cambodian people to more suffering. Over one in ten children born in 1990 died before their fifth birthday (116 deaths per 1000, births, Unicef).

1993 - 1997

More than twenty years ago, acclaimed Japanese photographer Kenro Izu visited Siem Reap to photograph the temples of Angkor. Shocked by the post-war poverty and state of healthcare, he vowed to open a hospital that would ensure any child could get the healthcare they needed.

AHC's gates first opened as a hospital with just three Cambodian doctors, ten nurses and one bed.

With the support of medical volunteers from around the world, generous donors and a dedicated team, AHC is still saving lives over twenty years later.

One of the first doctors, Dr Ngoun Chanpheaktra, now leads the organisation.

Our Vision

Every child in Cambodia gets quality compassionate healthcare, wherever they live and whatever their ability to pay.

Our Mission

Improve healthcare for every child in Cambodia.

Our Values

Prosperous and secure communities is the foundation and requires participation from all of us.”

Duong Vibol

What is a patient contribution?

AHC introduced the patient contribution scheme in July 2022 after thorough consultation with parents showed some parents could and would like to make a small contribution to the cost of their child's care.

There is a flat $5 contribution for any out-patient service, with a slightly higher fee requested for some aspects of in-patient services. The contribution reflects a small portion of the overall cost. This is in order for AHC to continue providing services free for the families who are unable to pay.

Our Hospital

As healthcare in Cambodia has evolved, so has AHC.

We provide specialist care for children across Cambodia with long-term, rare or acute conditions. Our skilled Cambodian staff are pioneering care rarely available elsewhere in the country, treating children with:

Long-term conditions like asthma, diabetes, epilepsy, cerebral palsy, tuberculosis, heart disease, lupus and HIV.

Rare conditions like cancer, treating over 30 types and specialising in eye and blood cancers.

Acute conditions like life-threatening infections and injuries – our neonatal and paediatric intensive care units are amongst the best in the country.

Beyond Our Walls

AHC aims to improve healthcare for every child across Cambodia through education for health workers, community members and caregivers.

We're a teaching centre of excellence inspiring a new generation of health workers.

We're working in some of the poorest communities in Cambodia to empower caregivers with vital health information. AHC is one of three paediatric teaching hospitals rebuilding and futureproofing the Cambodian health workforce. The majority of nursing students in Cambodia train at AHC along with medical, midwife, dental, physiotherapy, social work and pharmacy students within Cambodia and from overseas. Our unique approach utilises expertise from international mentors and combines theoretical teaching and hands-on training.

quotation-marks I am so grateful for this experience at AHC. I learned a lot of new things from the doctors and nurses here, especially the importance and impact of a warm welcome to all patients, treating them like they are your own family. My goal as a midwife will be to help my village move away from traditional styles of medicine and giving birth, to a modern and safer way to ensure my hometown be a happy community. quotation-marks - Bunong midwife-to-be, Srey Phem

In the community AHC works in some of the poorest and most remote areas of Cambodia. Access to health services, quality care and levels of health literacy are significantly lower in rural areas, where 75% of Cambodians live. AHC builds rural teachers and health staff's knowledge, skills and confidence and providing caregivers with simple health information that can prevent children becoming ill.
